The Amharas have historically inhabited the north, central and western parts of Ethiopia, and have been the politically dominant ethnic group of this region. Their origins are thought to have been located near modern day (Amhara) Sayint, Wollo, a place that was known as Bete Amhara in the past. The Amhara are currently one of the two largest ethnic groups in Ethiopia, along with the Oromo.

Ethiopia's population is highly diverse. Most of its people speak a Semitic or Cushitic language. The Oromo, Amhara, Somali and Tigrayans make up more than three-quarters (75%) of the population, but there are more than 80 different ethnic groups within Ethiopia. Some of these have as few as 10,000 members. English is the most widely spoken foreign language and is taught in all secondary schools.
