In literature, writing style is the manner of expressing thought in language characteristic of an individual, period, school, or nation. Thus, style is a term that may refer, at one and the same time, to both conventions that go beyond the individual writer and to singular aspects of individual writing. Beyond the essential elements of spelling, grammar, and punctuation, writing style is the ...

Currently, the teaching of writing tends to focus on linguistic or "surface" features (Lea & Street, 1998) without making explicit that developing an argument is the overarching requirement. Instead, academic writing instruction should start from this requirement and treat related aspects as subordinated.
